Well, you know, it's hard to know what particular aspect of this particular project to pick on because there's so many things wrong with I mean, you know, an 800-pound relic in the living room is climate change. I mean, we've added 10 more parts per million of carbon in just the last We're now 410 and the goal is 350 so four years. we're already 60 over the goals. We're adding, you know, 10 parts per carbon, you know, 10 parts per million of carbon every four years. It's not going to take as long before we're going to make this planet totally uninhabitable. I don't know what we can even consider expanding oil lines, you know.

I understand Enbridge seems to think there's a need to replace this particular oil line because it's, you know, carrying oil, which is apparently refined and then used, but they also want to expand the capacity, which is my understanding, which just adds more.

So I think we need really a further study on how much, you know, more expansion we can take.

And I don't think we can take any, to be honest with you. We should be shutting down oil as much as possible because there are alternatives. I mean, we're in the middle of a transition in energy, an energy transition, if we're smart, to renewables. Which I think, you know, if we get serious about it can be used to replace a lot of what we use our fossil fuels or oil for.

And, you know, the oil that comes out of Alberta, the tar sands oil is some of the most carbon dense oil that there is. I mean, I read that it produces 17 to 30 percent more carbon just in the process of getting it out of the ground and refining it and whatnot, than normal. So, I mean, it's a dirty oil, you know.

And then, you know, plus you've got, you know, speaking of dirty oil, I mean, you know, you look at how it affects the people in Alberta, the Indigenous people there. I mean, we're so cautious about wanting to placate our Indigenous people here, which I think makes sense, I mean, they have a long cultural history here and things that they rely culturally and even economically on, like wild rice. But, you know, if we were really serious about this, we wouldn't even let that oil get across the border because the people, the Indigenous people in Canada are treated so harshly. I mean, they've had their land essentially raped. People, you know, the people that have to live in the vicinity of this tar sands oil are getting higher rates of cancer, you know, they're dying. There are more still births.

I mean, just everything under the sun where, you know, people are exposed to this, and they very often don't have the alternative of moving, you know. So if we were really serious about, you know, climate justice or environmental justice, we wouldn't even let this oil into the country the way, you know, the way the Indigenous people are treated in Canada with the extraction of tar sands oil.

You know, the big oil companies are saying, you know, it's wasted assets. They have assets they can't use now because there's such a glut of oil on the market. And, you know, and for the foreseeable future, because we have other countries coming on line with their oil like Libya and Iraq, you know, they're expanding their oil. And with the fracking in this country in places where we thought we couldn't, you know, get at the oil before, now we can, the lighter oil. You know, that glut is going to continue on for the foreseeable future and if we're smart we'll be replacing fossil fuels with renewable energy.

And, you know, I just read today that renewable energy has increased something like 139,000 percent in the last 20 years, or something like that. Which compared to like the Internet or to the Smart phones, which have increased about 30,000 percent, so you can see that solar, you know, renewable energy is really taking off. And they'll get better, as technologies evolve and as technologies to address particular problems, like storing current or whatever.

But, you know, I think that's kind of a queue to -- you know, my fear is that, you know, there's going to be a pipeline to nowhere. They're going to build this pipeline and they want, what, two and a half football fields, 750 yards corridor? Which is just a humongous scar on the earth. Right through the most iconic waters in Minnesota, which is the Mississippi headwaters, you know. And not only that scar, but the service roads have to be built.

I mean, it sounds to me like they're planning for more than one pipeline, you know. Why, I don't know, because you certainly don't need 750 yards for one pipeline to go through, to build a corridor, unless you're planning on putting in more than one pipeline in eventually. You know, there was the whole Sandpiper thing.

But, you know, and it's not only, you know, the scar on the land, but it's if that pipeline goes through there's going to be leaks. I mean, there is not an oil pipeline in the world that does not leak eventually. The Dakota Access pipeline, which is new in, has already had two leaks. It's a brand new pipeline, for God's sake, you know.

So, I mean, when you add it all up, you know, really the only alternative is no pipeline. You know, I think if it's absolutely necessary then it should be put in a corridor that already exists, not a whole brand new one, which is going to disrupt more, you know, the environment of the country, the people who live, you know, in that particular area where they're suggesting the corridor should go, the Line 3 corridor. But any way you look at it, in the big picture it doesn't make sense.

Like I say, how long can we keep fiddling around? I mean, 410 parts of carbon per million, that's an increase of 10 parts in just the last four years. And, you know, Climate 350 is an environmental group, which it said, you know, we need to get to 350 if we're going to keep this planet decently habitable. I mean, at the way we're going we're going to hit 500. And a large part of this planet is going to be uninhabitable, I mean, people just aren't going to be able to live.

In the long run it's going to cause a lot of problems because people are going to be migrating, there are going to be droughts, you know, they're going to be looking for other places to live. In fact, I think there was a study put out, some department within the Pentagon, that said that climate change is our number one national security problem for the foreseeable future because it's going to result in, you know, people migrating, being in conflict, or water, land, and, you know, all the things that can lead to war. And which, you know, I'm sure we'll find a way to try and get involved in.

So, I mean, it just doesn't make sense.

I mean, at some point in time we got to say no.

We've got to be looking at the future, we can't stop fiddling around. We've got to get serious about it.

MR. DAVID JEROME MANUEL: Okay. My name is David Jerome Manuel, D-A-V-I-D, J-E-R-O-M-E,

Thank you very much.

M-A-N-U-E-L. I'm a citizen and resident of the state of Minnesota. I live up in the Red Lake Indian Reservation.

And I am opposed to the new pipeline because I hunt and fish and harvest the wild rice along the new proposed pipeline. My favorite ricing river is the Moose Horn River near Cromwell, Minnesota, where the pipe, the proposed pipeline is going to go through if it's approved.

I believe that the new proposed pipeline route is -- it goes through too many wetlands and wild rice rivers, and lakes, too close to our natural resources that are enjoyed by all Minnesotans. Regardless of race or class, you know, sex. I think that our natural resources here in the state of Minnesota need to be protected at all costs.

And while I am not against consumption of energy for commerce or recreation, I believe that our emphasis should be put on clean energy and solar and wind and other forms of energy. And we need to start thinking about the finite resource that oil is. It's not infinite, there's just a limited amount, and the environmental cost of extracting that and the risks that we take going through a pipeline I think are too great to allow and that's why I am not in favor of the new pipeline route.

MR. MATTHEW WATKINS: Matthew Watkins.

M-A-T-T-H-E-W, W-A-T-K-I-N-S. And I'm here as a business agent for Local 49 who was involved in the pipeline before becoming an agent with Local 49.

And I fully feel that these projects are beneficial to the economic status of Minnesota and society overall. We have to look at the entire picture, not just what affects Minnesota and our local economy.

The global market and demand for oil has not decreased and there's no reason for the state of Minnesota to lose out on their share of the economic benefits of the oil industry.

I also believe it can be done safely and effectively and believe the timeline should be followed as far as the letter of the law in regards to the process.

And that's really all I got to say today.

I'll keep it short and sweet.

MS. ERIKA BAILEY-JOHNSON: My name is Erika, E-R-I-K-A, and my last name is hyphenated, it's Bailey-Johnson, B as in boy, A-I-L-E-Y, hyphen, Johnson, O-N.

So I am going to read this part, but then

I have just little pieces I'm going to augment with.

Okay. We do not need any more pipelines running through Mother Earth risking soil and water quality and climate stability for future generations. It is not a question of whether there will be a spill but when. Minnesota and the tribal nations residing within its borders pride itself on our lakes and rivers, our sacred waters.

Small pipeline leaks are difficult to detect and clean soil and water are infinitely more valuable than oil. Broader arguments exist about the impacts pipelines have on treaty territory, the degradation of habitat, and what to do with pipelines when they are decommissioned.

One of the questions that I asked the people inside the room was what the options were for the pipeline. And one of the options I feel should be that there is no new pipeline and that the old Line 3 is removed. Our energy, transportation and agricultural infrastructures are based upon a finite resource. We need to figure out how to transition, and the sooner the better, as fossil fuels have resulted in negative impacts and tremendous risk on our quality of life and the interconnected web upon which we depend.

There is no perfect solution to facilitate the transition, but we can certainly do better. We can certainly increase conservation efficiency and renewable energy projects. We can certainly work to change our default settings and not allow more fossil fuel infrastructure to become established.

One of the examples of this is the amount of food wasted in the United States each year. The U.S. Department of Agriculture estimates that about 27 percent of food is wasted in the U.S. each year, which equates to approximately 350 million barrels of oil.

It's important to notice the emphasis on the relationship of food and energy. Agricultural productivity has increased dramatically thanks in large part to the adoption of new technologies and inputs, chemical fertilizers, which are all based on fossil fuels. This has led to substantially higher yields through much less human labor. This agricultural transformation from human and animal power to chemical power has left the food industry entirely dependent on fossil fuels.

From my perspective, wasting 30 percent of our food and agriculture industry is something that we can do, something that we can -- it's something that we can have an impact on in a much broader way than building a new pipeline. And a much better way than building a new pipeline. Instead of building more or bigger pipelines, we should be working to create less demand for this limited resource and in fact removing pipelines. Conservation and efficiency measures, more fuel-efficient vehicles, as well as sensible renewable energy installations can go a long way to slow the demand for oil. Currently there are no substitutes for many products made from oil. In fact, it takes oil to make non-oil technologies, like solar panels and wind turbines. We know we must transition to a new fossil fuel-free era, while using oil responsibly to produce systems that eliminate the need for oil makes good sense.

It is typical the pipeline and fossil fuel companies to assume that their projects will be approved. They purchase pipes before final approval. They build sections of the pipeline before the entire line is approved. This is arrogant and deceitful. This line risks clean air and water, healthy soil, and a stable climate for several generations, which are all worth more than any drop of oil. Reducing the oil is far more important than creating more oil infrastructure.

All of the jobs that have been touted by the creation of this pipeline are short term. So the big question is is this project needed for Minnesota and my answer is a simple no. It's time to transition away from a fossil fuel era and that's good.

I'm trying to think if there is anything else. I talked to her about three questions that I had inside.

So one other point I want to make is about the Canadian pipeline abatement procedure that they already have on the books. And it's a very, like, highly complex system that they have for pipeline abandonment. So instead of there being an option A, which is leave it in the ground, and an option B, which is remove it from the ground, they encourage like multiple techniques. So it would be, depending on where the pipeline is, if it's under a lake, it's really difficult to remove it without some substantial risk, and so I think there should be a combination of removal and abandonment procedures that take place similar to what Canada has already established.

1	Yeah. So I guess, finally, just the
2	certificate of need, I feel that this is not
3	necessary for Minnesota and poses risks and
4	short-term jobs.
5	And then as far as the environmental
6	impact for Minnesota, it is more than I am willing
7	to risk for my kids.

14	of employing local people to remove the pipeline.

17	I just want to make a statement that I
18	feel I've read the draft environmental impact
19	statement, I feel it's a well done, comprehensive
20	document, that should help inform the Commission on
21	the decision-making.

24	W-E-D-I-N-O-O-K-W-E, Gii Wedinookwe, Anishinabe.
25	My biggest concern, I guess, would be what is standing out at Standing Rock, also what's going on in the Alberta tar sands area. My biggest concern are the missing, murdered women and children that go along with this pipeline and the extreme extraction.

I kind of called out on the -- the brotherhood, or whatever you want to call that, you know, union guys. And I was told that I had fake numbers. My numbers are not fake. There are over close to 4,000 missing murdered women to this date and the numbers are still growing.

I would like to know, there is only just a few sentences of what they're going to do about the problem with the sex trafficking and the sexual abuse of women and children and also men too. So I would like to have that be more of what is their plan.

I can name numerous women's groups that would be more than happy to help them out with that, see what they want to do with all that. We've got the Minnesota Women's Sexual Coalition, we have the Missing Murdered Women's Coalition. I mean, there's so many, many groups out there that have all the facts and, you know, and I have had numerous friends of mine missing and murdered too. Those are my concerns.

I also was sexually attacked through

Morton County police and that wasn't good, but that's what I am. I'm a water protector, if you want to call me that. I'm a -- I'm just not going to stand back and let that happen. I have little ones at home, nieces and nephews and stuff that I'm worried about. Things like that.

I don't know, like I told them before, that I will be out on the line. I have been out on the line. I have been riding my horse out on the line and I will continue to do so. And I see you out there, we're going to have a little talk about what you're doing out there and stuff like that.

I would personally like to see myself how they build and construct pipelines. I would also like to see Enbridge, if they're going to do these drastic things, if they can come out of the fossil fuel industries and go into the, you know, the alternative energies, that would be great. But for the most part I would like to see Enbridge hire me and some of my crew for, like, you know, just walking the line and just being overseers of our lands and our territory. And I'm for them to clean up their mess. And I'm not for another pipeline whatsoever.

We have the most pristine waters here, we have the most pristine lands here, and I've watched Enbridge ruin everybody around the world and I'm not going to do that here. So I will be out there and I will bring all 10,000, 15,000 of my friends, and I'll times that by 10 and we'll see you all on the front line. This isn't Standing Rock, this isn't Morton County, this is Anishinabe territory and they're not going to get away with it.

You tried to take away our hunting and gathering rights and we took you to federal court and it cost them $11 million. We will do the same with Enbridge. We will hold them up as long as we can. And you bring this bull crap to my door, of course I'm going to go into a warrior mentality and that's what you're going to get.

But I'm a very peaceful women and I would rather everybody would live in peace and just be a community together and honor the gift that the creator has given us, is this land, this precious planet. This is all we have. There's not going to be moving on this marsh shit and all this other crap. It's really sad that they want to ruin the earth. It's really so pathetic.

I'm tired of hearing all these old 1 people, all these elder white people talking about 2 3 how they want this and that. Their whole generation has ruined this land and the water and the people 4 and it's time to stop. They're already on their way 5 out the door. They could give a shit what happens 6 7 to us here. They could give a fuck of what happens And that's really pathetic. 8 to us here. And I do 9 not look at them as my elders, I will have nothing to learn from them. And they have a lot to learn 10 from us and I hope that the future generation can 11 understand that and live with us and be the 12 13 stewardship that we need them to be. Or else. 14 (Comments concluded.)
